The Bridging Generations Conference: Black Health Leaders of Tomorrow will be The Black Girl Pre-Health Collective's (BGPC) second annual pre-health conference. This will be a full-day event held in the Milken Institute School of Public Health. Graduate students and healthcare professionals of different career paths will be invited to speak during two panels of the event, with a networking break included in the program for students to create connections in the healthcare field. Admissions officers from medical, nursing, physical therapy, and physician assistant programs will also be present to help students prepare for applying to graduate programs. Interactive breakout sessions will grant students the opportunity to either learn venipuncture, garner a better understanding about the importance of bioethics, or improve their professional documents (e.g. resume, LinkedIn profile, professional headshot, etc.) through a professional workshop. All guests will be invited to breakfast and lunch, and prizes may be distributed throughout the event.
